

Articling Student (2012-2013)

Hensel Barristers is looking for an articling student for 2012-2013 to work in our Toronto office on a range of litigation files involving First Nations and Aboriginal peoples. Hensel Barristers acts on behalf of First Nations, their members and Aboriginal organizations in disputes involving treaty and Aboriginal rights, child welfare (on behalf of First Nations with standing), elections under the Indian Act, commercial and contractual relationships, select criminal matters and human rights. We appear before all levels of court, tribunals, and public inquiries in Ontario, Saskatchewan and British Columbia, and before the Federal Court (Trial and Appeal Divisions).

Candidates should have a strong academic record and an interest in courtroom (trial and appellate) advocacy. Preference will be given to candidates with knowledge of and experience with Indigenous cultures, languages, and perspectives.

Applications should include a cover letter, curriculum vitae, law school transcripts and a writing sample.

Please direct inquiries and applications to: priscilla@henselbarristers.com

The deadline for applications is December 8, 2011
