

Program Participant

Angelique Palmer, JD

Angelique Palmer is a lawyer with a wide range of legal experience in both the private and public sector. Ms. Palmer has practiced in large and boutique law firms, and in various branches of government. She has extensive experience practicing and resolving disputes through litigation and alternative dispute resolution in civil matters, in the areas of commercial, employment, insurance, construction, public utility, real estate, and bankruptcy law. She is currently a Hearings Officer with the Ontario Superior Court of Justice.

Ms. Palmer is a former Judicial Clerk experienced in legal research and writing, as well as, in teaching these skills in a professional and academic setting. Ms. Palmer is also a certified mediator, a 2014 American Arbitration Association A. Leon Higginbotham, Jr. Fellow, and Adjunct Professor who teaches and trains students in the area of Trial Advocacy and Alternative Dispute Resolution. She is a regular speaker, author, and co-author of several legal publications. Most recently, a piece entitled, "Room for Me? - An Analysis of Whether Mediation is a Viable Solution to School Bullying", published in the Cardozo Journal of Conflict Resolution, Volume 16, in the Fall of 2014. Ms. Palmer has a strong interest in practicing, teaching, and in developing effective conflict resolution systems and strategies.

Degrees • Honors B.A., University of Toronto, 2000 • J.D., Michigan State University College of Law, 2003

