On many files you have to act quickly to determine if an injunction is the right course of action. Especially when a client needs urgent relief to stop someone from taking steps that are damaging them, uncover who is behind an anonymous statement or act that are causing them harm, or to secure assets or evidence that might be destroyed or put beyond the reach of the Court. Deciding whether to seek injunctive relief raises key questions. Is this case appropriate for extraordinary relief? Should you proceed ex parte? What evidence do you need to provide and what relief should you seek? Do you need an expert? What materials will the judge want to review and what questions will she ask? What do you need to explain to your clients about the consequences of injunctive relief?

Join us as our expert faculty of bar and bench help you tackle these important questions, provide you with the insights you need to put your best case forward and help you to avoid potential pitfalls.
